

Flex Therapist CEUs

Autism Spectrum Disorder

1. Estimated prevalence of ASD is eight times higher among boys than among girls.

- A. True
 - B. False
-

2. Persistent deficits in which of the following is required for the diagnosis of ASD?

- A. Social-emotional reciprocity
 - B. Nonverbal communicative behaviors used for social interaction
 - C. Developing, maintaining, and understanding relationships
 - D. All of the above
-

3. It is reasonable to hypothesize that children with autistic disorder could benefit from supplementation with glutathione or its precursors.

- A. True
 - B. False
-

4. Many persons with autism have additional medical conditions such as sleep disturbance, seizures, and gastrointestinal (GI) distress.

- A. True
 - B. False
-

5. All good early intervention programs share all of the following features, EXCEPT for:

- A. The child receives structured, therapeutic activities for at least 10 hours per week
 - B. Highly trained therapists and/or teachers deliver the intervention
 - C. The therapy is guided by specific and well-defined learning objectives, and the child's progress in meeting these objectives is regularly evaluated and recorded
 - D. The program provides the child with opportunities to interact with typically developing peers
-